

Dear Purple Class,

“Twas the best of times; twas the worst of times.” – Charles Dickens.

We are all really, really missing you now in these strange times! Feels like we’ve been out of school forever! I’ve quoted Charles Dickens from his famous book, “Tale of two cities”, because I know you’re all missing the routine of school, your friends and us and some of you may be feeling quite uneasy, but try and make the best of things. This is such an opportunity to pursue and learn something that you’re really interested in.

First, of course, please make sure that you’re logging on to Purple Mash and completing the work that you’ve been set – you need to click on “2Dos”. I jumped out of my skin this week when I played a voice message – how wonderful! Once you’ve also completed the learning grid, there are some added links to keep you busy. There are so many great resources out there and you have lots of time. Bitesize even has KS1 lessons on French and Spanish! Also, considering you’re all using computers, why not learn to touch type properly? (That’s when you don’t look at the keys). <https://www.typingclub.com/>

We’ve all been keeping busy. Duygu has been spending her time playing with her cat and taking care of her garden. Isn’t her cat beautiful? She had a lovely quiet Easter and she did not eat all of her eggs.

Tracy is really missing her lovely grandchildren and her children but she gets lots of phone calls from them all. She is still taking Jack for walks and she bumped into Hazel at Forty Hall, where Jack chased the ducks. Tracy ate a few more eggs than Duygu over the Easter break.

Pat wanted to let you know that she's missing you lots. She is well and is staying indoors and in her garden. She has cleaned the garden and planted sunflower seeds in yogurt pots. She's also planted spring onions, which she is using in her food.

My passion for reading has been reawakened and I'm really enjoying losing myself in a good book. I'm getting through each novel in about 3 days, whilst drinking huge amounts of tea.

Hopefully we'll know soon when we'll be returning to school and we look forward to finding out what you've all been up to.

Love,

Sarah, Pat, Tracy and Duygu
